With Rebecca Khan

Gain expert guidance for managing complex continence issues in paediatric clients, so you can support all families with confidence and care.

Meet Rebecca Khan

Rebecca is a paediatric occupational therapist with 24 years' experience supporting families through public and private practice. Since 2002, she has developed a strong focus on continence and toileting through hands-on experience, research, clinical education, and founding Kids That Go Therapies. She also brings lived experience of chronic illness, parenting three daughters, and running a small business.

As a clinician, Rebecca is convinced of the pivotal role supervision has in her own clinical practice, career longevity and personal wellbeing. Rebecca's supervision approach includes listening and validating; coaching over telling to build clinical reasoning; linking with services, resources, and research; and offering practical, tailored strategies. She's passionate about growing exceptional OTs and supporting a healthy balance between professional, personal, and social life.

Supervision with Rebecca focuses specifically on the therapist's continence skills and clients, supporting the development of informed, confident clinicians in this essential area.
